F. SMITH. THE LIFE OF PRESIDENT JOSEPH SKETCH OF

PRESIDENT JOSEPH F. SMITH.

For twenty years President Smith has been Second Counselor of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter day Saints. He was born Nov. 13th, 1838, in Far West. Caldwell county, Missouri. The period of his birth was a stormy one in the history of the Church—a time when it was but in its infancy. His father, Hyrum

Smith, the Prophet's faithful brother, was all and more to Joseph than Jonathan was to David. In life they lived, labored and suffered together, and when their time came, died like men filling the martyr's grave for the salvation of mankind. Mary Fielding, the mother of Joseph F. Smith, was a native of England.

treachery of George M. Hinkle, Being courring of George M. Hinkle. Being courring tide of the shot, but this failed, by the interposition of Providence through Gen. A. W. Doniphan. They were then hustled off to prison, but before starting were allowed a few minutes to bid farewell to their families. their families, being told they would never see them again. With such scenes being enacted, with mob rule holding sway, plunderings, drivings, imprisonment without trial, or conviction, poverty and distrass, at such a timework. and distress, at such a time was Joseph F. Smith born into the world. His childhood days were spent amid scenes of per-secution and hardships, which resulted in the martyrdom of Joseph and Hyrum Smith. His mother left Nauvoo in 1846, as an exile from her home and country, for no other cause than that of worshiping God according to the dictates of her own conscience. Although at this time Joseph F, was but a lad of S years of age, he drove an ox team for his mother across the state of Iowa. During the sojourn of the family at Winter Quarters, Joseph was occupied as a herd boy, in which he took special pride, feeling that his mother's cattle were the only means by which they were to make their exodus by which they were to make their exodus across the great plains of the "Far West." Even after reaching the valley Brother Smith was engaged in herding. and so close and conscientious was his attention to duty that he never lost a through neglect or carelessness; "hoof" through neglect or carelessness; this attention and devotion to responsibilities placed upon him has always marked his character, and is seen in all the labors of his life. During his trials at Winter Quarters, while herding cattle, he passed through a thrilling experience with Indians, who suddenly came npon him and his companions for the purpose him and his companions for the purpose of driving off their eattle. In the excit-ing chase, two Indians, one on either side of Brother Smith, rode up to him, and taking hold of his arms lifted him from the saddle, and probably would have scalped him, but for the unexpected apscanped min, but for the mexpected appearance of a number of men who were going to the hay field. The Indians suddenly dropped him to the ground, and thus by the aid of Providence his life was saved; his bravery and fidelity to trust saved the cattle. President Smith was taught by the example and present was taught by the example and precept of his noble mother that in the performance of all duties and labors, he should go to the Lord in prayer. As a striking illustration of the faith with which he became imbued in his carly boyhood, by the example of his mother, we present the following incident, related by President

Smith, in his own language:
"In the spring of 1847 a portion of our family crossed the plains, following the pioneers to the valley of the Great Salt Lake, the remainder of the family intending to proceed on their journey to the west the following spring. In the fall of 1847 my mother and her brother, Joseph Fielding, made a trip down the Missouri river to St. Joseph, Mo., about 150 miles, for the purpose of brother. obtaining provisions and clothing for the family for the coming winter, and for the journey across the plains the follow-ing spring. They took two wagons with two yokes of oxen on each. I was althe journey across the plains the following spring. They took two wagons with two yokes of oxen on each. I was almost 9 years of age at this time, and accompanied my mother and uncle on this journey as a teamster. The weather was unpropitions, the roads were bad, and it rained a great deal during the journey, so that the trip was a very bard, trying and nnpleasant one. At St. Joseph we purchased our groceries and dry goods, and at Savannah we laid in our store of flone, meal, corn, bacon and other provisions. Returning to Winter Quarters, we camped one evening in an Quarters, we camped one evening in an open prairie on the Missouri river bottoms, by the side of a small spring creek, which emptied into the river about three-quarters of a milo from us. We were in plain sight of the river, and could apparently see over every foot of the little open prairie where we were camped, to the river on the southwest, to the bluffs on the northeast, and to the timber which skirted the prairie on the right and left. Camping near by, on the other side of the creek, were some men with a herd of beef cattle, which they were driving to Sayannah and St. Joseph for market. We usually un-Joseph for market. We usually un-yoked our oxen and turned them loose to feed during our encampments at night, but this time, on account of the proximity of this herd of eattle, fearing that they might yet mixed market. proximity of this herd of eattle, fearing that they might get mixed up and driven off with them, we furned our oxen out to feed in their yokes. Next morning when we came to look them up, to our great disappointment our best yoke of oxen was not to be found. Uncle Fielding and I spant all the manning well night partit I spent all the morning, well nigh until I spent all the morning, well nigh untit noon, hunting for them, but without avail. The grass was tall, and in the morning was wet with heavy dew. Tramping through this grass and through the woods and over the bluffs, we were soaked to the skin, fatigued, disheartened and almost exhausted. In this pitiable plight I was the first to return to our wagons, and as I approached I saw my wagons, and as I approached I saw my mother kneeling down in prayer. I halted for a moment and then drew gently the Lord not to suffer us to be left in this helpless condition, but to lead us to recover our lost teau, that we might continue on our travels in safety. When tinue on our travels in safety. When she arose from her knees I was standing near by. The first expression I eaught upon her precious face was a lovely smile, which, discouraged as I was, gave me renewed hope and an assurance I had not felt hefore. A few moments later Uncle Fielding came to the camp, wet with the dews faint futigued and wet with the dews, faint, fatigned and thoroughly disheartened. His first words were: 'Well, Mary, the cattle are gone!' Mother replied in a voice which fairly rang with cheerfulness, 'Never mind, rang breakfast, hear weight for Mother replied in a voice which fairly rang with checrfulness, 'Never mind, your breakfast has been waiting for hours, and now while you and Joseph are eating, I will just take a walk out and see if I can find the cattle.'

My uncle held up his hands in blank astonishment, and if the Missonri river had suddenly turned to run up stream, neither of us could have been much more surprised. 'Why, Mary, he exclaimed, 'what do you mean?' We have been all over this country, all through the timber and through the herd of cattle, and our oxen are gone—they are not to be found. I believe they have been driven off, and it is useless for you to attempt to do such

I believe they have been driven off, and it is useless for you to attempt to do such a thing as to hunt for them.'

'Never mind me,' said mother. 'Get your breakfast and I will see,' and she started toward the river, following down the little stream. Before she had proceeded out of speaking distance the man the fittle stream. Before she had proceeded out of speaking distance the man in charge of the herd of beef cattle rode up from the opposite side of the creek and called ont: 'Madam, I saw your oxen over in that direction this morning about daybreak,' pointing in the opposite direction from that in which mother was going. We head plainly what he site direction from that in which mother was going. We heard plainly what he said, but mother went right on, paid no attention to his remark, and did not even turn her head to look at him. A moment later the man rode off rapidly toward his herd, which had heen gathered in the opening near the edge of the woods, and they were soon under full drive for the road leading toward Sayannah, and soon road leading toward Savannah, and soon

"My mother continued straight down "My mother continued straight down the little stream of water, until she stood almost on the hank of the river, and then she beckoned to us. (I was watching her every moment and was determined that she should not get out of my sight.) Instantly we rose from the "mess-chest," on which our breakfast had been spread, and started toward her, like John, who outran the other Disciple like John, who outran the other Disciple had been spread, and started toward her, like John, who outran the other Disciple to the sepulchre, I outran my uncle and came first to the spot where my mother stood. There I saw our oxen fastened to a clump of willows growing in the bottom of a deep gulch which had been washed out of the sandy banks of the river by the little spring creek, perfectly concealed from view. We were not long in releasing them from handage and getin releasing them from hondage and getting back to our camp, where the other cattle had been fastened to the wagon wheels all the morning, and we were soon on our way homeward bound, rejoicing.

"This circumstance was one of the "This circumstance was one of the first practical and positive demonstrations of the effect of prayer I had ever witnessed. It made an indelible impression upon my mind, and has been a source of comfort, assurance and guidance to me throughout all my life."

The impression made upon Joseph's mind by this striking answer to his mothers' prayer, has never left him, but has done much to encourage him mothers' prayer, has never left him, but has done much to encourage him in meeting every responsibility; causing him to realize that no matter how ardnous the task the Lord will not fail those who put their trust in Him. Crossing the plains from Missouri river, to the Salt Lake Valley, Brother Smith (though less than 10 years of age at that time) drove two voke of oven attached time) drove two yoke of oxen attached to a beavily laden wagon, the entire dis-tance of more than one thousand miles.

Reaching the valley of Salt Lake with his mother, Sept. 23d, 1848, he continued in charge of the cattle as herd boy for several years, and never lost an animal, notwithstanding the great number of large wolves in the valley. This work of herding was interchanged with plowing, harvesting, canyon work, etc., idleness taking no part in the life of this

The opportunities for education in those early days of trying experiences of the control of the con those early days of trying experiences of the Church, were limited. Such learning as Brother Joseph possessed he acquired ehiefly from his mother. She taught him to read the Bihle during their pilgrimage across the plains, in the tent, and by the camp fire Such facilities as bave heen afforded him have not passed by unimproved. Being fond of hooks, he reads extensively the best of them, always with a purpose in view—viz.: to learn lessons of worth for practical use in life, and it is safe to say that no man living applies them better to himself and in the, and it is safe to say that no man living applies them better to himself and family than does President Joseph F. Smith. His mother died Sept. 21st, 1852. leaving him an orphan at the age of 14. When 15 years of age he was called on a mission to the Sandwich Islands. He received his endowments in the Old received his endowments in the Old Council House, and was set apart in the same huilding by Apostles Parley P. Pratt and Orson Hyde. Brother Pratt, who was spokesman in setting him apart, declared that he should receive the knowledge of the Hawaiian language "by the gift of God as well as by study."
This prophecy was literally fulfilled, for in less than four mouths from his arrim less than four mouths from his arrival (two weeks of this time was spent in severe sickness) he was able to make a tonr of the Islands of Mani; to preach, baptize and administer the Sacrament, etc., all in the native language. He left his mountain home to fulfill this mission, Mary 27th, 1854, in company with other his mountain home to fulfill this mission, May 27th, 1854, in company with other missionaries. The Southern route was taken, accompanying as far as Cedar, President Young and party, who were on their tour to the Southern settlement. This little hand of missionaries was headed by Parley P. Pratt. In crossing the desert country, from Southern Utah to California they were followed a long distance were followed a long distance by numbers of the Pah-Ute Indians, who were almost famishing for food. The only alternative was to share food with them, which they did to keep on friendly them, which they did to keep on friendly terms. As a result the missionaries were compelled to subsist on very short rations, consuming the last of their supplies the day they reached Cajon Pass. Parley P. Pratt proceeded to San Francisco. During the sojourn of Brother Joseph F. in California, he worked hard for a livelihood to earn means sufficient to pay his passage across the Pacific to Honolulu: much of his time being sport Honolulu; much of his time being spent in the manufacture of cut shingles. He and his fellow missionaries embarked upon the "Vaquero," and after a somewhat disagreeable voyage they landed in Honolnlu, Sept. 27th, 1854. After a few days there Brother Joseph was assigned to the Island of Maui, to labor in company with his cousin, Silas Smith, S. B. Thurston and Washington B. Rogers. He was shortly afterward prostrated for He was shortly afterward prostrated for more than two weeks with a severe fever. Upon his recovery he was assigned to Kula, the place where President Cannon first introduced the Gospel to the Hawaiian race. He pursued the study of the language with much diligence and faith, soon being able to hear witness that "by the gift of God, as well as hy study," were the words of Brother Pratt concerning his acquisition of the language verified; his experiences brought him near to the Lord. Relative to the manifestations of the Spirit to him he says: "Of the many gifts of the Spirit which were manifest through my Spirit which were manifest through my administration, next to my acquirement of the language, the most prominent was perhaps the gift of healing, and by the power of God, the casting out of evil spirits which frequently occurred." One stance occurred at Wailuku, where sojourned with a native family, being engaged in the study of the language. One night the woman was suddenly seized with evil spirits. She went through all manner of hideons contertions. Her husband was overcome with such for that he translad as leaf in such fear that he trembled as a leaf in such fear that he tremhled as a leaf in the wind. Brother Joseph was seized with fear at this new and unexpected demonstration, but suddenly all fright left him, the power of the Holy Ghost rested upon him, and he stood upon his feet, facing the woman possessed of de-mous. "Iu the name of the Lord Jesus Christ I rehuke you," he said, when sud-denly the woman fell limp to the floor and became as one dead. The hushand uronounced her dead, and then set up a and became as one dead. The hushand pronounced her dead, and then set up a hideous howl, which Joseph promptly rebuked, after which quiet and peace rebuked, after which quiet and peace was restored and the young missionary proceeded with his studies. Brother Joseph labored upon the Island of Mani over eighteen months with great success. The readiness hy which he acquired and used the language astonished his brethren and the natives. After President Hammond took his departure for his home in Utah, Brother Joseph presided over the Mani Conference; later he also presided over the Kohala Conference; later he also presided over the Kohala Conference for six months, and the Island of Hawaii for the same length of time.

Brother Joseph was laboring upon this island at the time of the great volcanic eruption of 1855. He says: "I experienced the tremendous shoeks of earthquake which immediately preceded the cruptions, and subsequently visited the ernptions, and subsequently visited the great lava flow which issued from the crater. It was said that this eruption in the quantity of lava thrown out, has probably never been surpassed during the residence of foreigners on the islands. The flow continued for about thirteen months, reaching to within six or seven miles of the city of Hilo, more than sixty miles from the crater. The city and bay of Hilo were in imminent danger of destruction for months. I have seen it stated since that the area covered by lava from this eruption exceeded three hundred square miles, or about one-thirteenth of the area of the Island of Hawaii." President Smith continued his labors upon the islands with efficiency, passing through many scenes which add-ed strength to his testimony of the Gospel and fitted him for positions of responsibility, to which he has since heen called. He has sometimes said that he called. He has sometimes said that he was "never thankful but once that his first mission was upon the Sandwich Islands, and that once has been all the time, from the time of his mission to the present date."

Owing to the approach of Johnson's

Owing to the approach of Johnson's army to Utah President Young sent instructions that he desired all Elders laboring in foreign missions to return home. Accordingly President Smith and other Elders took passage on the bark Yankee. Oct. 6th, 1857. Upon landing at San Francisco they reported to President George Q. Cannon, at the Western Standard office. Shortly after arriving on the coast Brother Smith journeved south to Santa Cruz, there joining a company. He next arranged to drive a team to Utah for George Crismon, arriving in Great Salt Lake City Feh. 24th, 1858, having been absent four years all but a little over three months. Immediately upon his return home he joined the militia, and started with an expedition to intercept the hostile army, which had heen sent to Utah, without the slightest cause of justification. He served under Col. Thomas P. Callister, and later was Chaplain of the regiment under Col. Heher C. Kimhall. He says, in speaking of his enlistment and expe-

"The day following my arrival home I reported myself to President Young and reported myself to President Louing and immediately enlisted in the legion to defend ourselves against the encroachment of a hostile and menacing army. From that time until the proclamation of peace, and a free and full pardon, by President Buchanan came, I was constantly in my coddle, prespecting and explaining the saddle, prospecting and exploring the country between Great Salt Lake City aud Fort Bridger, under the command of and Fort Bridger, inder the command of Col. Thos. Callister and others. I was on picket guard with a party of men under O. P. Rockwell, when Commissioners Powell and McCollough met us near the Weber river with the Presideut's proclamation. Subsequently I was on detail in the deserted city of Great Salt detail in the deserted city of Great Sait Lake, until after the army passed through the city, and thence to Camp Pioyd. Af-ter this I assisted my relatives to return to their homes, from which they had fled,

At the session of the Legislature held in the winter of 1858-59 President Smith officiated as sergeant-at-arms in the council, and on March 29, 1858, he was orcil, and on March 29, 1858, he was ordained into the Thirty-second Quorum of Seventies. He was married April 5, 1859, and on Oet. 16, of the same year was ordained a High Priest, also being made a memher of the High Council of Salt Lake Stake of Zion. At the April Conference, 1860, Brother Joseph was called on a mission to Great Britain. He was in straightoned circumstances finanealled on a mission to Great Britain. He was in straightened circumstances financially and was almost obliged to discontinue housekeeping, and allow his wife to return to her mother's home for the time being. He was soon on his way, in company with his cousin, Samuel B. to return to her mother's home for the time being. He was soon on his way, in commany with his cousin, Samuel B. Smith, each driving a four-mule team, to pay their way across the plains. They had an interesting trip to the Missouri river; from that point to New York they went hy way of Nauvoo and viewed the homes of their childhood days, calling upon the wife and children of the Prophet Joseph Smith. They sailed for Liverpool July 14, arriving in that port on the 27th of that month. During his mission in England President Smith traveled in various conferences, and in all his sion in England President Smith traveled in various conferences, and in all his ministrations among the Saints and strangers left an impression for good that ean never he effaced. President George Q. Cannon was also in Great Britain on a mission at the same time, and it was while there, perhaps, more than any other place they learned to love and esteem each other; where a friendship was established which has grown stroughest the years have group by. That was er as the years have gone by. That was the commencement of an intimacy which their labors together in the same coun-cils of the Holy Priesthood have en-hanced from that time to the present moment.

During his mission in Europe President During his mission in Enrope President Smith, with President George Q. Can-non, visited several of the conferences in Denmark, and with Elder Brigham Young, Jr., and others, visited Paris, France, Brother Josenh F, was released after filling a most honorable and effi-cient mission, returning home in 1863; himself and companions were in New cient mission, returning home in 1863; himself and companions were in New York City, at the time of the "dreadful riots," which occurred in July of that year, Crossing the plains, he was Chaplain in Caot. John W. Woolley's company. Arriving home he found his wife in a very poor state of health, which for some time grew worse, but he waited upon her day and night with little or no rest for many weeks, when she gradually recovered her health. It was not in the providences of the Lord that Brother recovered her health. It was not in the providences of the Lord that Brother Joseph should remain long at that period of his life to enjoy the quiet and peace of home, for iu March, 1864, he started on his second mission to the Sandwich Islands. He went in company with Apostles Lorenzo Suow, Ezra T. Benson, Elders William W. Cluff and Alma L. Smith. The purpose of their mission was to regulate the affairs of the church on the Islands, which had been greatly interfered with by one Walter M. Gihson, who had presumptuously established himself as leader of the Church upon the Islands. They labored faithfully to convert Mr. Gibson from his wrong doing, but to no avail. The man was not honest at heart, and they were obliged, for the protection of the native Saints, to excomnunicate Gibson from the Church. The trouble being settled, the Apostles soon returned to America, leaving President Smith and other American Elders in charge of the mission. He returned from this mission in the winter of 1864-65. While upon this mission an incident occurred which is worthy of note: 65. While upon this mission an incident occurred which is worthy of note:

The ship upon which the brethren arrived was anchored in the channel, where the sea was usually very rough. A breakwater had been constructed, and by the protection of it the natives successfully ran their hoats ashore. However, in approaching it there was danger of disaster. It was proposed to land the passengers in the ship's freight boat, which was unwieldy and not easily man-

President Smith at once apprehended the danger and stoutly protested against the proposition, warning the brethren of the great danger of capsizing the hoat at the breakwater. He refused to ac-company them in the boat, and tried to persuade his co-laborers not to go. They were persistent, however, and made the attempt, while Brother Joseph offered even to go alone for a better boat. When they were determined to go he persuad-ed them to permit him to remain on the ed them to permit him to remain on the anchored ship and leave their clothing and valuable articles with him. They consented to this reluctantly, and as they moved away from the ship, Joseph stood upon the latter gazing at his brethren with awful anxiety, apparently knowing their fate. His fears were not ungrounded, for as their unwieldy freight boat struck the breakwater a heavy wave dashed against it and instantly causived it emptying its human boat struck the breakwater a heavy wave dashed against it and instantly capsized it, emptying its human cargo into the surging billows. A boat manned by natives came to the rescue and recovered all hut President Snow, when they started for shore. Brother W. W. Cluff demanded the return of the best that they wight seems. Brother Snow, which was done, and when his remains were recovered, to all appearances he was dead. Through the mermains were recovered, to an appearances he was dead. Through the mereies of the Lord, however, he was restored to life. All this time Brother Joseph stood in awful suspense, a helpless spectator upon the floor of the anchored ship. This action of President Smith indicates that fearless trait of his character which has been manifest through-out his life, showing that he has the courage of his convictions, and is most wigorous and earnest in expressing them. When Brother Smith returned home from this mission, he was employed as a clerk in the Endowment House and at a clerk in the Endowment House and at the Historian's office, frequently per-forming home missionary work in the Territory. He was also an active and efficient member of the Great Salt Lake City Council for several terms; the ef-fects of his influence in that municipal body are today manuscripts of worth to fects of his influence in that municipal hody are today monuments of worth to the city of Salt Lake. The possession of Liberty Park today by Salt Lake Citis due to his influence and determined convictions, more than to the labors of any other man. MODERN METHODS.

Many perhaps have noted that certain preachers, ealled ministers of the meek and lowly Savior, are again at their old trick of disturbing the peace of mind of liberty-loving people. They are in a cowardly manner doing to the Mormon Elders just what the enemies of Christ did unto Him in His day, and yet they claim it Christlike. When a porcupine gets in a close place he always begins to throw his quills. It is his only means of defense. He is not a fighter, he is not a foot racer; his only protection is to make himself as disagreeable as possible. When our Elders go into a neighborhood the ministers will not meet them with Scripture and reason, they will not come out openly and accept the truth as it is in Jesus, but instead use the same method as the porcupine of throwing their quills of falsehood. It is their only means of defense, but at once cowardly and unjust, and in the end will bring condemnation to their souls. These preachers are not called of God, and therefore have not His spirit to guide them, but think more of money getting than of soul saving. Their only protection and shield is in flinging filth when they get cornered. Nature gave unto the porcupine his quills as a means of defense when cornered, and so does Satan arm these so-called preachers with falsehoods, that when cornered by truth they might defend themselves by letting them fly broadcast. It does seem strange, nevertheless it is a fact, that the different religious sects will jangle and quarrel with each other until it seems that a reconciliation is out of the question, and yet just as soon as an Elder of the Clirich of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints comes into their midst they will all join hands and lay plots and devise ways and means of getting rid of these "despised Mormons," Instead of taking up their Bibles and going to the Elders in brotherly kindness, with a desire to point to them their errors, they take up the club and lash; raise mobs and then tell the people they are humble servants of the Master. "It must needs be that offences come, but wee unto that man by whom the offence cometh.

"It were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and he cast into a sea, than that he should offend one of these little ones."

"WITHOUT MONEY AND WITHOUT PRICE."

"Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat; yea, come, buy wine and milk without money, and without price." (Isaiah 55:1.) Here we have a call, uttered by a Prophet of the living God unto all those who are athirst for rightconsness. This call extends, as the Prophet hath said, unto "every one that thirsteth;" but fearful lest the poor should think themselves not accounted worthy of this "milk and wine" of salvation, the holy man of God—Isaiah—continues by saying, "and he that hath no money; come ye, buy and eat." Who is it that "hath no money?" Is it not the poor among men, and those that are in the lowly walks of life, that have no money? It is verily true! And they-the poor among men—are given the blessed promise of enjoying the gifts of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. The Gospel, therefore, must needs be free, else how could they "that have no money" purchase the same?

Let us turn our attention to that good old Book of Books-the Holy Bible-for shall find within its sacred pages we much to comfort and gladden the hearts of the poor; we shall find much to support and uphold the doctrine that the Gospel shall be preached free: and we shall also find that the Lord condemns those who preach for hire, and divine for money.

The Apostle Panl says, "For the love of money is the root of all evil; which while some eoveted after, they have erred from the faith, and pierced themselves through with many sorrows. But thou, O, man of God, flee these things." (I Tim. 6:10, 11.)

This passage of Scripture is preceded by a verse which informs us that riches drown men in destruction and perdition. In this same chapter of Paul's epistle to Timothy, we find that those destitute of the truth suppose that gain is godliness does not (5th verse). Today, we observe that a Holland.

large salary makes a big preacher. If the Christian (?) minister of today can demand and obtain $5,000 a year, why it goes to say that he is an evangelist of no small type. But the country pastors, sometimes called "Jack-legged preachers," who can only succeed in draining the members of their circuit of, say $500. why he is not designated as a great preacher, as is his fellow laborer who receives the larger salary. Why is this the case? Cannot we truthfully say that it is an exact fulfillment of what Paul said, writing to Timothy: they are "destitute of the truth, supposing that gain is godliness?" (I Tim. 6:5.)

"Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." (I Cor. 11:1.) Paul coveted no man's silver or gold, but energetically labored for his sustemance with his own hands. (Acts 20:33 and 34) that he, by so doing, might not abuse his power in the Gospel. (I Cor. 9:18.) Peter commanded the Elders to feed the flock of God, not for filthy lucre (money), but of a ready mind (I Peter 5:2), not following the way of Balaam, who loved the wages of unrighteousness (II Peter When our Lord sent His Apostles ont on their first mission, He commanded them to go forth and preach saying, "The Kingdom of Heaven is at hand. Heal the sick, cleanse the lepers. raise the dead, cast out devils. Freely ye have received, freely give." (Matt. 10:7-8.) He never revoked this command, and it is enjoined upon all who would preach the everlasting Furthermore we hear Him declaring, as an evidence of His Messiahship, that "to the poor the Gospel is preached." (Luke 7:22.) He, the Savior of the world, the Redeemer of all the sons and daughters of Adam's race, neglected not the poor, neither did He deprive them of the glorions privilege of hearing and accepting the glad tidings of great joy which were heralded by Him and His humble followers.

The Scriptures of Holy Writ return again and again to condemn the practices of a hireling clergy, and to uphold. indorse and sustain the actions of the true followers of the Lamb who preach the Gospel free.

In conclusion, let the words of John, the divine Revelator, be heard, "And the Spirit and the bride say come, and let him that heareth say, come, and let him that is athirst say come; and whosoever will, let him take the water of life free-(Rev. 22:17.) ly."

PRESIDENT LORENZO SNOW.

Our venerable leader and President, Lorenzo Suow, has been afflicted with illness of late, but we are pleased to announce to the Elders and Saints of the Southern States Mission that he is convalescent at the present time. Let the prayers of all Israel ascend to the Throne of God in behalf of President Snow, that we may all be blessed with his presence, comforted by his loving words, and instructed by his choice admonition and God-like wisdom, for many days yet to come.

Elder W. O. Phelps is now in charge of the Louisiana Conference. Although there are hut a small force of Elders in that conference, yet the brethren in the past have done nobly, and we rest assured that under the guidance of Brother Phelps the good work will continue.

THE BOOK OF MORMON—ITS AUTHENTICITY.

A LECTURE GIVEN BY INVITATION, APRIL 29, 1900, BEFORE THE OHIO LIB-ERAL SOCIETY, CINCINNATI, OHIO, BY ELDER BEN. L. RICH.

est objections advanced against the authenticity of the work in question. Many more arguments and objections were raised but they are all too absurd and selfto receive any attention contradictory whatever. And the history of the western ancients will have to be explained by much stronger arguments than have been advanced heretofore to disprove its truth-fulness. Now since the objections are so palpably weak and irrational, the evidence of its authenticity must necessarily evince strength and reason. And I ask you eandidly to weigh carefully the proofs of its elaim.

There is a fulfillment of prophecy in the coming forth of this record.

The Book of Mormon purports to be a history of a remnant of the people of Israel that was practically destroyed. It is claimed to have been taken from the earth and translated in an ancient style somewhat resembling biblical. And Isaiah (29 chan) in specking of a people akin somewhat resembling biblical. And Isaiah (29 chap.) in speaking of a people akin to Israel wrote: "And thou shalt be brought down and shall speak out of the ground and thy speech shall be low out of the dust, and thy voice shall be as of one that hath a familiar spirit, out of the ground, and thy speech shall whisper out of the dust." Does not the Book of Mormon fulfill this ancient prediction? Some of the characters were transcribed from the plates and given to Martin Harris. the plates and given to Martin Harris who took them to Professor Anthon, of New York. The Professor gave a certificate of the genuineness of the characters Early of the genimeness of the characters, saying that they resembled the ancient Egyptian Chaldaic Assyria letters. A Prof. Mitchell of New York also gave similar testimony. "Where did this man Smith get the records?" asked Mr. Anthon Haywa tall the hayraciant. thon. He was told that he received them from an angel. He continued. "Bring me the plates and I will translate them." me the plates and I will translate them." Mr. Harris said that a part of the records was sealed, that Joseph was not permitted to translate but part of them, wherenpon the doctor heartily ejaculated. "I cannot read a sealed book," thus fulfilling another of Isaiah's predictions (29 chap.) which read: "And the vision of all is become unto you as the words of a book (the words of the book, not the book itself) which men deliver to one that is self) which men deliver to one that sen) which her deliver to one that is learned, saying read this I pray thee; and he saith I eannot for it is sealed; and the book is delivered to him that is not learned." Can you not also see the fulfillment of ancient prediciton in this passage?

The Book of Mormon purports to be The Book of Mormon purports to be a record of the descendants of Joseph. The Bible is principally a record of the descendants of Judah. We hold that the Bible and Book of Mormon contain many truths in common, and are one in the canse. The Prophet Ezekiel knew of the coming forth of the two books and purposely wrote (37 chap.):

"Morcover, thou son of man, take thee

"Moreover, thou son of man, take thee one stick, and write upon it, for Judah, and for the ehildren of Israel his eomanions; then take another stick, and write upon it, for Joseph, the stick of Ephriam, and for all the house of Israel his commanions.

Thus you see the frailties of the strong-upon sticks and called the writing a scroll book or a stick, the weight and signifi cance of this quotation can be seen

Christ made a remark recorded by John (10) which has great meaning. In the Book of Mormon it teaches that Christ visited the people of this continent after his crucifixion. We know that on the eastern continent Christ did not go among any people other than the Laws. And many people other than the Laws. any people other than the Jews. And until the explanation found in the abridgement of Mormon the statement of Jesus was considered what considered the statement of Jesus was considered whether the statement was considered mysterions. He said: "And other sheep I have which are not of this fold; them also I must bring and of this fold; them also I must bring and they shall hear my voice, and there shall be one fold and one shepherd." There are many more Biblical proofs of the Book, but the paragraphs quoted show that its advent satisfies clearly, literally and exactly predictions of the Prophets.

But from the researches of scientists in the traditions of the Indian and in the antiquities of America we find greater or tiquities of America we find greater evi dence of the authenticity of the Book of Mormon. Now when the record was published in 1829, the wonderful ruins and relics of the new world's antiquities practically lay undisturbed, in the sleep of centuries. But the facts revealed in American Archeology and ethnology wonderfully show that the work brought forth by Joseph Smith is at once reasonable and consistent.

Firthermore, the history of America's past, makes it plain that an imposition could not summon to its support such evidences as discovery and investigation afterwards contributed to the account published through the instrumentality of the low Joseph the boy Joseph.

When the Book of Mormon said that this continent had been inhabitated by a powerful, intelligent race which enjoyed a eivilization akin to that of the old world in past centuries, men of more zeal than wisdom laughed at the idea. They said ean this man believe he can palm of said ean this man believe he can palm off onto intelligent people such absurdities? They sneered at the proposition that the progenitors of the Indian ever lived in a state of civilization. But research came to the rescue, and we now find proof that the civilization of ancient America rivals that of ancient Egypt, Assyria and Babylonia. The ancients of this hemisphere understood an advanced style of architecture. They built cities with walls, with terraces, with towers and with paved streets, many of which exist well preserved today in New Mexico, Arkansas, Arizona, Mexico, Yucatan and Central and South America. In Yucatan there is and South America. In Yucatan there is a foundation which contains a stone of almost incredible dimensions, a rock much larger than ean be managed nowadays. This stone is shown to have been taken from a quarry over a hundred miles dis-tant To have quarried and transported rante to have guither as the gives such a stupendous block of granite gives evidence that a knowledge of levers and engineering prevailed. They knew how evidence that a knowledge of levers and engineering prevailed. They knew how to temper eopper to such hardness that it could cut steel, an art unknown today. They understood the art of making and coloring glass. They understood geometery, the science of war and fortification. In New Mexico there have been unearthed networks of cemented rock ennals, which carried water onto an arid land. This shows that the 19th century is not the only age that can boast of artificial irrigation. Hieroglyphies and queer characters are found engraved on walls, columns, monuments, pyramids and parchment scrolls over all the hemisphere, proving that the ancients possessed a written language and enjoyed an advanced ciriliarities. not show us what thou meanest by these?
"Say nnto them, thus saith the Lord.
Behold I will take the stick of Joseph, which is in the hands of Ephriam, and the tribes of Israel his fellows, and will put them with him, even with the stick of Judah, and make them one stick, and they shall be one in mine hand." When we realize that the ancients wrote on papyrus and parchment and rolled them people no more worthy of such blessings?

Does not the God of heaven tell us that He is an impartial Being, no respector of persons? Would it not be the height of partiality to bless the inhabitants of one part of the earth with the plan of happiness and salvation, and hold another race in chains of darkness? But the Book of Mormon solemnly at-firms that the ancients of this land did have the Work of God and did know of Christ and His gospel. When this in-formation came to the world in the early decades of this century, men ridiculed more and more the claims of Joseph Smith. They thought surely he had greatly underestimated the intelligence of the age or else had lost his mental balance. But investigation again game to the research But investigation again came to the rescue, as investigation often does. It shows that the religion and tradition of the aborigines of America resembled that the Israelites. Although the traditions and belief through apostacy, ignorance and degeneration lost many of their beauties and gave place to vague superstitions, we can however, see in the belief of the ings. Not many years ago in Licking County, O., a tablet was discovered, containing, inscribed in corrupt Hebrew, the ten commandments. Parchments have the ten commandments. Parchments have been discovered recording prophesies of Isaiah and other ancients. There are extant many stories among the Indians relative to the delige and the confusion at Babel. The Central American used to practice the rite of circumcision. The ancient Pernyians offered burnt animal exercisions. We note in these things and

ancient Pernvians offered burnt animal sacrifices. We note in these things, rudiments of the practices in the Mosaic dispensimation. It is explained from the fact that Lehi left Jernsalem long before the Christian era. He brought with him a language of his fathers and worshipped in the customs of the Jews. The Book of Mormon also states that a knowledge of Christ was held by the peoples whose history it records, and we find in the religious beliefs of the Indian taces corroborative evidence of this asraces corroborative evidence of this assertion. The ancient Chilians said that their fathers were visited by a wonderful person full of grace and love, who did many wonderful works and taught them to worship a creator who dwells in the heavens, whom they called the Great Spirit. The ancient Mexicans found a deity in one Quetzalcoatl who, they held, took worships are the spirit. detry in one Quetzaicoati who, they here, took upon himself human nature, endured sorrows and pain and voluntarily died for the wrongs of their fathers. This same Quetzaicoati is chiseled in the walls of an ancient temple, with ontstretched arms, crueified, hearing imprints in his hands and feet. We can see in this traditional Quetzalcoath none other than the crueified Christ. The early Catholic priests found in Yueatan a perfect knowledge of the God-head, among the natives. And they, the priests, in their inability to account for its origin, said that Satan had instituted a counterfeit religion. The people of Yueatan believed in God who resided in the heavens, even the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit. Thy said the Father's name was Yeona; that his son was born of a virgin; that he was scourged and put to death with arms outstretched upon a beam of wood; that he came to life again and went to His of an ancient temple, with ontstretched he came to life again and went to His Father and afterwards sent to them the Holy Spirit, who eams in the person of a good merchant, distributing precions gifts abundant and divine. This is not mysterious to one familiar with the Book of Mormon.

We are also told that the sign of the cross was prevalent among the Mexicans at the time of Cortez and that the priests who accompanied him were astonished to who accompanied him were astonished to find that the Aztee priests practiced an ordinance similar to the sacrament of the Lord's Supper. They were seen to mix blood with a cake of flour and to consecrate it and distribute it to the people to eat, saying that it served as the flesh of Deity. Again I say, while these ordinances and traditions of the Indian peoples are corrunt, we can plainly see in ples are corrupt, we can plainly see in them corroboration of the statements of the Book of Mormon.

From the researches of such men of unquestionable authority as Waterman, Baldwin, Scott, Lord Kingsborough, Baldwin, Scott, Lord Kingsborough Schoolscraft, Pritchard, Botwini, Clare goo, Priest, Morgan and Prof. Jas. E. Talmage, one of few Americans of the Edinborough Society of Geology, has compiled these conclusions:

(1) "That America was inhabited in very ancient times, probably soon after the building of the Tower of Babel." This agrees with the Book of Mornon; for it says that Jared left the old world for this continent soon after the confusion at Babel.

says that dared left the confusion at Babel.

(2) "That the continent has been successively occupied by different peoples, at least by two classes or races at widely separated periods." The Book of Mormon states that the Jaredites occupied this coutinent from the seenes at Babel till the sixth century B. C., and that the Nephites and Lamanites occupied the hemisphere from the fifth or sixth century B. C. till the fourth century A. D., when the Nephite nation became extinct, leaving only a degenerate remaint of the Lamanites.

(3) "That the aboriginal inhabitants came from the east, probably from Asia, and that the latter occupants, or those of the second period, were closely allied the state of the second period, were closely allied.

of the second period, were closely allied to, if not identical with, the Israelites." The Book of Mormon says that Jared came from Asia and that Lehi, an Israelite, came direct from Jerusalem.

(4) "That the existing native races of America have sprung from a common stock." This agrees identically with the Book of Moymon.

Now, my friends, appeal to your reason and ask yourselves the question, could Joseph Smith, a youth unlearned in the sciences and classics, unschooled in geography and history, by his own accordand wisdom have authorized a work which in after years summond to its which in after years summoned to its support the evidences of an extinct civilization? Had the work heen of an ignorant, presuming mind, is it not much more reasonable to conclude that instead of proving the touks of American antiof proving, the tombs of American anti-quities would have furnished evidence guites would have infinished evidence sufficient to disprove and overthrow such a work as the Book of Mormon with all its claims? The force of archeological and ethnological corroboration of the Book of Mormon is self-evident and gives it uncontradicted support of its authenticity.

But there are other evidences of the Book of Mormon. The question might be asked: Who other than Joseph be asked: Who other than Joseph Smith saw the plates from which the record was translated? On account of the sacred character of the volume, it was not exhibited to satisfy mere curiosity. But cleven men, praised for their honesty, truthfulness and sohriety, give their testimonies to the fact that they saw and handled the plates. They subscribed their names to an affidavit, solemnly affirming upon the honor of their manhood firming upon the honor of their manhood, that they saw and handled the curious volume; that it was marvelous to their understanding; but nevertheless they gave their word to all men and nations what they saw and did, and called upon God and angels to witness that they spoke the truth. But, says one, could these men not have been deceiving? Men noted for honesty and truthfulness do noted for honesty and truthfuluess do not very often deceive in such matters, but let us see. When men deceive they do it either for wealth, for power or for notoricty. If these eleven witnesses were not speaking the truth what other men not speaking the truth, what other motives would prompt them to fabricate? Could they have sought wealth by their testimonies? It seems a queer way of becoming rich, for hy their act they were becoming rich, for hy their act they were socially ostracised; nay, more, they were ridiculed and abused. By being "Mormons" they were mobbed, pluudered of all they possessed, their homes hurned and their lives jeopardized. These are not the proceedings of men in search of wealth by lying. Most of the number lost their standing in the church, lived in poverty and were offered bribes to retract from what they had sworn to; but they never denied their testimonies. No, it could not have been for money that they gave their good names. Then, was it for power? Had it been, when most of them lost their standing in the church, when they were excommunicated and became enemies of Joseph Smith, and forfeited the chance of realizing any amforfeited the chance of realizing any ambition or power whatever, had power been their motive, they, in anger or in jealonsy, would have denied their testimonials. Surely, through revenge, one would have retracted his statement to overthrow the work which grew on his testimouy. Was it for reputation or notoriety, then, they might have deceived? Indeed, what caviable notoriety; to be called an imposter, a "Mormon," to be mobbed, and risk their lives, all for the sake of reputation. Had their motives been for notoriety, when they were excommunicated from the church, could they not have gained more popularity and notoriety by denying their testimonies and thus be the means of overthrowing such a growing and gigantic organizaing such a growing and gigantic organiza-tion? But they did not. They could not have been under a spell of mental hallu-cination. Who ever heard of a young man deluding eleven of his superiors by mental magnetism, and holding them de-ceived all their lives, when separated from them in after years in every way? No, it was no deception, delusion, or inposition. The evidence of any three of the eleven, if given against any man in the courts of the United States, would convict him of any crime. The testimonies of Joseph Smith and the eleven with nesses to having seen and handled the plates, would convince before any im-partial court. There are millions of peo-ple who believe in the resurrection of Christ, through the testimonies of a few Christ, through the testimonies of a few witnesses, two thousand years ago. Yet the evidence of the witnesses of the Book of Mormon is stronger, more binding, more conclusive and lasting than the witnesses of the immortal Christ. The evidence of the Book of Mormon is not from contradicted sources, filtered through ages of ignorance and superstition, as have many of the strongest supports of the Christian faith. There is much more cause to question the witnesses of Christ's immortality than to doubt the validity of the testators of the Book in question. Still there are men who accept without thought the former, and because the latter savors of Mormonism, still not knowing what Mormonism is, they will not give it reasonable attenis, they will not give it reasonable attention. No: the witnesses of the metallic plates were not deceiving. heard of a conspiracy among men em-bracing whole families, risking their lives. bracing whole families, risking their lives, sacrificing their property, losing their good names, and all for what?—for the sake of elevating and making hetter the human family? Who ever heard of such a deception! Had it been deception, in after years, when in disappointment, when in poverty, when entertaining hitterness against one another, surely one, just one, would have exploded the folly, had it heen a folly. But to the end each man upon his deathbed, whether in or ont of the pale of the church, reaffirmed his testimony of the Book of Mormon. What would Christendom give for such evidence in proof of its ancient record? evidence in proof of its ancient record?

Now, my friends, you have heard in brief my humble attempt in support of a work which I revere as bearing the impress of truth upon its pages. The Book work which I revere as bearing the impress of truth upon its pages. The Book of Mormon in its construction is simple, logical and harmonious. The spirit which permeates its pages feeds the soul. To read it is to be a better man, to feel purer and harmorier. It, in itself, is an argument able to satisfy its claims in its evidence of prophecy and consistency. You have heard exploded its objections and noted its proof from various sources. Is it not reasonable? Does it not deserve careful and serious investigation? If it is true, is it not of incalculable value to the human family? If it is not true, why have the brains of men been at a loss to show its falsity? If true, it will weather every wind of opposition. Its proof makes it true. It explains the origin of the Indian races. It is a criterion by which to tell the truths of the Bible and serves as a key to many so-called mysteries of the Jewish seriptures. It is an evidence that God lives. It is an evidence that Jesus is the Christ. It is an evidence that when the Spirit of Joseph Smith was beaten back to the bosom of its God by an ungrateful and blood-guilty world, the inhabitants of the earth had again marrived everling to earth had again martyred a valiaut son of the Great Eternal Father.

On the 13th inst. the brethren were successful in getting the Castleherrie school house to hold a meeting iu. That night about 8:30 o'clock (meeting having been given out during the day), a crowd of boys and men, numbering about thirty, began to gather. The Elders had sung a few men, numbering about thirty, began to gather. The Elders had sung a few songs, when a young Baptist preacher informed them that "they did not allow Mormons in their neighborhood." The preacher of the word (?) then withdrew, when eggs, rocks, etc., were thrown through the windows and doors hy outside parties. The brethren were then told to "make tracks," and amid a shower of the aforesaid over-ripe hen fruit and the vilest cursing, they moved up the road with the moboerats following. Finally at the turn of the road the hrethren retreated into the protecting woods, while the mobbers thinking they had continued up the road, proceeded past them. while the mobbers thinking they had continued up the road, proceeded past them. In closing the Elders write: "This is onr first experience with rotten eggs in the hands of modern Christians, and we hope it will be the last, for indeed these people's idea of Christianity and rotten eggs seem to work harmoniously."

Why ministers are sout to the so-called

Why ministers are sent to the so-called "poor heathen lands," to civilize those people, when in this boasted laud of liberty such uncivilized people exist, we cannot understand. When men claiming to be ministers of the Son of God will persecute Mormon Elders they show their true color—hypocrites of the worst type.

SKETCH OF PRESIDENT J. F. SMITH.

1867, was called to fill a vacancy in the Council of the Twelve. When President Young chose to have more than two connsclors President Joseph F. Smith was one of the number selected.

In 1868 he was called with President Woodruff and Elder A. O. Smoot, to go to Provo and labor for the upbnilding of that city and Utah county. He served one term in the Provo City Council. By permission of President Young he in 1868-69 removed his family back to Salt Lake City and resumed his labors in the permission of President Toning he in 1868-69 removed his family back to Salt Lake City and resumed his labors in the Endowment House and Historian's office. On Feb. 28, 1874, Brother Joseph F. started on his second mission to Great Britain. This time to preside over the European mission. During his labors in Europe, Scandinavia, Germany, Switzerland and France were visited, as well as the several conferences of the British Isles. Brother Joseph proved himself to be one of the very choicest Presidents that has ever presided over any mission, not only for his prompt and wise methods of conducting affairs, but also his humbleness in obeying the whisperings of the Spirit, for which he constantly lives; for his personal love and tenderhearted kindness to every Elder in the mission, which has endeared him to the hearts of thousands of Elders and Saints, but also be the British and beloved directly up.

mission, which has endeared him to the hearts of thousands of Elders and Saints, who have lived and labored directly un-der his personal ministrations. Soon after the decease of President Geo. A. Smith, in the fall of 1875, Broth-er Smith was released to return home; and upon returning from this labor of and upon returning from this labor of love he was appointed to preside over the Saints in Davis connty, the county at that time not being organized into a Stake of Zion. He held this position until the spring of 1877, when he was called on his third mission to Great Britain. Before leaving he witnessed the dedication of the St. George Temple, the first completed in the Rocky Mountain country. During his labors on this mission Elder Orson Pratt came to Liverpool to publish new editions of the Book of Mormon and Doctrine and Covenants. Later they and Doctrine and Covenants. Later they appeared with copions marginal ref-erences and foot notes, prepared by Elder Pratt. Abont the 1st of September they received the sad news of the death of President Brigham Young and were requested by the Council of the Aprice requested by the Aprice noted places in church history, in Missouri Illinois, Ohio and New York, calling upon David Whitmer, one of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon. When ing upon David Whitmer, one of the three witnesses to the Book of Mormon. When the Endowment honse was reopened in Salt Lake City, subsequent to the death of President Young, President Joseph F. Smith was placed in charge. In October, 1880, when the presidency of the Church was organized, with President John Taylor at the head, President Smith was chosen to be his second counselor. He was chosen to the same position under President Woodrnff, and now occupies that henored station under the presidency of President Lorenzo Snow, During the presidency of President Sonother Smith performed another faithful mission in the Sandwich Islands. While there he obtained an exact copy of the old Spanlding story, and by evidence incontrovertible showed that not the Slightest resemblance existed between the Book of Mormon and the Sandding story.

blance existed between the Book of Mormon and the Spankling story.

His labors in the City Council, the Legislature and other places of civil and financial responsibility are to proposed. to mention in a brief sketch. President Smith has filled every position of trust sand has med every position of trust assigned him with such unblemished honesty and fidelity, that no man ean justly say anght against him. One of the grandest traits of his character is impartial justice. The great system of Patriarchal Marriage, so well designed to prove the hearts of men and women, and to develop in them the principles and to develop in them the principles of pure love, charity, justice and impartiality, has no better examples among God's noblemen than President Joseph F. Smith. Whatever obligation he is under to that sacred principle for his existence, for the possession of his own posand for the possession of his own pos-terity, he is meeting that obligation man-fully, with the record that his example shall exemplify the truth of Celestial marriage as revealed to the Prophet Joseph Smith.

seph Smith.

During his counselorship in the presidency he has traveled extensively in the stakes of Zion, in Utah, Arizona, Colorado, Idaho, Canada and Mexico, and continues active, whether at home or abroad. As a fitting conclusion of this meagre sketch of a useful and noble life, we quote a pen sketch of President Smith from the able writer, Elder Edward H. Anderson:

"President Smith has been constantly

President Smith has been constantly in the service of the public, and by his straightforward course has won the love, confidence and esteem of the whole community. He is a friend of the peo-ple, is easily approached, a wise coun-selor, a man of broad views, and, con-trary to first impressions, is a man whose sympathies are easily aroused. I a reflex of the best character of "Mormon" people—inured to hard "Mormon" people—inured to hardships, patient in trial, God-fearing, self-sacrificing, full of love for the human race, powerful in moral, mental and physical

President Joseph F. Smith has an imposing physical appearance. Now completing his 62d year, he is tall, crect, well-knit and symmetrical in build. He When speaking, he throws his full, clear, brown eyes wide open on the listener who may readily perceive from their penetrating glimpse the wonderful men-tal power of the tall forehead above. His large head is crowned with an abundant growth of hair, in his early years dark, but now, like his full beard, tinged with a liberal sprinkling of gray. In conversation, one is forcibly impressed with the sudden changes in appearance of his countenance, under the different influ-ences of his mind; now intensely pleaswith an enthusiastic and childlike interest in immediate subjects and sur-roundings; now absent, the mobility of his features set in that earnest, almost stern, majesty of expression so characteristic of his portraits—so indicative of the severity of the conditions and environments of his early life.

As a public speaker, his leading trait is an intense earnestness. He impresses the heaver with his message more from the sincerity of its delivery, and the honest earnestness of his manner, than from est earnestness of his manner, than from any learned exhibition of oratory or studied display of logic. He touches the hearts of the people with the simple eloquence of one who is himself convinced of the truths presented. He is a pillar of strength in the Church, thoroughly imbued with the truths of the Gospel, and the divine origin of this work. His whole life and testimony are an inspiration to the young.

I said to him: "You knew Joseph, the Prophet; you are old in the work of the Church: what is you testimony to the youth of Zion concerning these things?" And he replied slowly and deliberately:

And he replied slowly and deliberately:

"I was acquanted with the Prophet Joseph in my youth. I was familiar in his home, with his boys and with his family. I have sat on his knee, I have heard him preach, distinctly remember being present in the council with my father and the Prophet Joseph Smith and others. From my childhood to youth I believed him to be a Prophet of God. From my youth until the present I have not believed that he was a Prophet, for I have known that he was. In other words, my knowledge has superseded my belief. I remember seeing him dressed in military uniform at the head of the Nauvoo Legion. I saw him when he crossed the river, returning from his intended western trip into the Rocky Mountains to go to his martyr-dom, and I saw his lifeless hody, togeth-er with that of my father, after they were nurdered in Carthage jail; and still have the most palpable remem-brance of the gloom and sorrow of flose dreadful days. I believe in the divine mission of the Prophets of the nineteenth century with all my heart, and in the authenticity of the Book of Mormon and the inspiration of the Book of Doctrine and Covenants, and hope to be faithful to God and man and not false to myself, to the end of my days.

THE PROBLEM SOLVED.;

BY ELDER JAMES KIRK.

Prominent among religious circles seems to stand the stubborn and intricate problem of how the firm and permanent foundation of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, or socalled Mormons, can be successfully combated to accomplish its overthrow. Theological schools have assailed it with a prospective triumph before them: but their brilliant banner of fancied victory has never been unfurled to wave over its rnined stronghold only in vain imagination. The learned, the wise, the great and small, have all contributed to effect its ntter annihilation. Sullen and malignant foes have frowned upon its gleaming battlements, but, like a winddriven cloud, have cast but a transient shadow of gloom npon its perpetual strongholds.

What seems to be most perplexing to the minds of all is the current of power which permeates the whole organization from center to circumference, uniting its members and their interests into one solid compact.

Some have attributed this unanimity to isolation, others to ignorance or plebeian subservance to their despotie lead-But the people themselves proclaim that it is the power of God. those who are swathed in the labyrinth of prejudice and bigotry would study more carefully the results of eause and effect, perhaps their mental burden would become less ponderons in trying to solve the "Mormon problem,"

Let us search the Scriptures for a little intelligence along this line.

The Apostle Paul, in teaching the ancient Saints, explained to them the nature and necessity of a completely organized body in the Church of God; that they should not be tossed to and fro and carried about with every wind of doecraftiness of men trine and ennuing whereby they lie in wait to deceive. (Eph. 4.)

Now, Paul goes on to tell us (I Cor. 12) that the body of Christ (the church) consists of Apostles and Prophets. teachers, evangelists, pastors, etc., Jesus head. (Eph. 4-11. Christ being the Eph. 5-23, Col. 1-18.)

That the subject may be made clear it will be necessary to place these members in their relative positions and dependency on each other. Christ being the head, the Apostles and Prophets being next in order, would constitute the trunk, the evangelists, pastors teachers the legs; and the members or Saints the feet and toes. Now, we find recorded in the fourth chapter of Ephesians that this kind of a body "fitly joined together and compacted by that which every joint supplieth according to the effectual working in the measure of every part maketh increase of the body unto the edifying of itself in love.

Saints upon this same subject, Paul says: "Now ye are the body of Christ in particular * * * and subject, Paul and members in particular the eye cannot say unto the hand, I have no need of thee; nor again the head to the feet, I have no need of you. Nay much more those members of the body which seem to be more feeble are necessary. * * * For our comely parts have no need; but God (not man) bath tempered the body together, having given more abundant honor to that part which lacked: that there should be no seism in the body; but that the members should have the same care one for another. And whether one member suf-ter all the members suffer with it; or one member be honored, all the members rejoice with it."

All that is necessary to an understanding of the nature, importance and harmony of such a thoroughly organized system as Christ effected upon the earth. according to Paul's explanation, is for one to acquaint himself with the workings and relationship of the members of his own physical organism, and the system of communication carried on between the various parts of the body; for Paul tells us that the church is identically the same in its organization and operations.

Now if you should ransack the whole domain of Christendom would you be able to find such a perfect and complete church organization? No. Outside of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints it cannot be found upon the earth. All churches professing to Christian look to Christ as their head. But the Apostles and Prophets, which constitute the main body of the church, are rejected by them as being unnecessary. But although Apostles and Prophets are dead and gone, evangelists, pastors and teachers, which form the legs to the body, are still alive and actively engaged in disseminating the Gospel trnths (?) in the world.

Who ever saw a head, legs and feet without a body? Paul tells us that the head cannot say to the feet, I have no need of you, and if such be true, certainly the feet and legs cannot say to the body, we have no need of you, for they, being the lesser members, would be left powerless by rejecting the greater. powerless by rejecting the greater. Now, if we should separate the head from the feet and legs by removing the trunk of the body, would it be possible for the legs or feet to have any connection with, or receive any revelation or intelligence from the head? Of course not, such a thing would he an impossibility.

Then, like the amputated limbs of the human body, the Christian world today is entirely cut off from all communica-tion with the head (Christ), and as it is only, a matter of time when the severed limbs will wither away and die, just so it will be with all those who deny the essentiality of Apostles and Prophets in the church or body of Christ.

Now, if we are willing to accept the teachings of the Bible in preference to that of man, there will be no schism in the body, the spiritual gifts will be enjoyed as in days of old and a current of power will permeate the whole system. Otherwise it is contrary to both reason and Scriptnre to suppose that such blessings could be enjoyed such conditions exist.

In conclusion, "Let no man deceive yon with vain words; for because these things cometh the wrath of God upon the children of disobedience. not ye therefore partakers with them.' (Eph. 5-6 and 7.)

History of the Southern States Mission.

October, 1897—As a whole, the mission work progressed very favorably, the Elders were holding a great number of meetings and distributing many books and tracts.

After an absence of more than four months, President Kimball returned to Chattanooga from the west, arriving Oct. 19, bringing with him his wife and children.

dren. On the 30th inst, a letter reached the office from Elder Thomas Martin, Jamestown, Ky_{tt}, bearing the news that Elder office from Elder Thomas Martin, Jamestown, Kyrt, bearing the news that Elder Lewis J. Bushman was very sick with typhoid fever, and asking how to best care for him. The following morning a telegram was received from Elder Martin informing President Kimball that Elder Bushman had just died. Instructions were immediately wired to Brother Martin to have the body embalmed and to take his sacred charge to Cincinnati. tm to have the body embalmed and to take his sacred charge to Cineinnati, Ohio, where it would be met by President Kimball. Of course the death of this brother caused a feeling of sorrow to overshadow the mission, but to the understanding minds of Elders and Saints they know that to die while in the service of the Eternal Father is but passing from this sphere to a better resting place. ing place.

The stringency of the quarantine regulations in the Gulf states, to prevent the spreading of yellow fever, hindered our Elders from doing much work in that part of the mission.

November, 1897—On the night of the 10th, Apostles F. M. Lyman and M. F. Cowley arrived from Zion. C.; the Virginia Conference was held near Haran, Va., on the 27th and 28th, Apostles Lyman and Cowley and President E. S. Kimball were present. On the 20th inst. twenty-one Elders arrived from Zion and were assigned to their varions fields of labor. The month closed with the most of the Elders enjoying good health, and working with a determination to scatter seeds of truth; to warn mankind of the precious truths held by the servants of God in this day and age. The Saints were vigorons in doing their duty, which was a sonree of much joy to those in charge of this part of the vineyard.
